

FUM

- Thus fighting fires a while themselves consume;
But freight, like Turks, forc'd on to win or die,
They first lay tender bridges of their fumes,
And o'er the breach in unclous vapours fly. Dryden.
2. Vapour; any volatile parts flying away.
Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers eyes. Shakespeare.
It were good to try the taking of fumes by pipes, as they do in tobacco, of other things, to dry and comfort. Bacon.
In Winter, when the heat without is less, it becomes so far condensed as to be visible, flowing out of the mouth in form of a fume, or crafter vapour; and may, by proper vessels, set in a strong freezing mixture, be collected in a considerable quantity. Woodward's Natural History.
3. Exhalation from the stomach.
The fumes of drink discompose and stupify the brains of a man overcharged with it. South's Sermons.
Plung'd in sloth we lie, and snore supine,
As fill'd with fumes of undigested wine. Dryden's Pers. Sat.
Pow'r, like new wine, does your weak brain surprize,
And its mad fumes in hot discourses rise;
But time these yielding vapours will remove:
Mean while I'll taste the sober joys of love. Dryden's Luren.
4. Rage; heat of mind; passion.
The fumes of his passion do really intoxicate and confound his judging and discerning faculty. South.
5. Any thing unsubstantial.
When Duncan is asleep, his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wattle so convince,
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
6. Idle conceit; vain imagination.
Plato's great year would have some effect, not in renewing the state of like individuals; for that is the fume of those, that conceive the celestial bodies have more accurate influences upon these things below, than indeed they have, but in grofs.
Bacon, Essay 59.
To lay aside all that may seem to have a shew of fumes and fancies, and to speak solids, a war with Spain is a mighty work. Bacon's War with Spain.
- TO FUME, v. n. [fumer, French; fumo, Latin.]
1. To smoke.
Their pray'rs pass'd Dimensionless through heav'nly doors; then clad
With incense, where the golden altar fum'd,
By their great intercessor; came in sight
Before the Father's throne. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. xi.
From thence the fuming trail began to spread,
And lambent glories danc'd about her head. Dryd. En.
Strait hover round the fair her airy band;
Some, as the sipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd. Pope.
2. To vapour; to yield exhalations.
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleopatra.
Silenus lay,
Whose constant cups lay fuming to his brain,
And always boil in each extended vein. Reformation.
3. To pass away in vapours.
We have
No anger in our eyes, no storm, no lightning;
Our hate is spent and fum'd away in vapour,
Before our hands be at work. Ben. Johnson's Catiline.
Their parts are kept from fuming away by their fixity, and also by the vast weight and density of the atmospheres incumbent upon them.
The first fresh dawn then wak'd the gladden'd race
Of uncorrupted man, nor bluish'd to see
The sluggish sleep beneath its sacred beam;
For their light slumbers gentle fum'd away. Thomson's Spring.
1. To be in a rage.
When he knew his rival free'd and gone,
He swells with wrath; he makes outrageous moan;
He frets, he fumes, he stares, he stamps the ground,
The hollow tow'r with clamours rings around. Dryden.
- TO FUME, v. a.
1. To smoke; to dry in the smoke.
Those that serve for hot countries they used at first to fume, by hanging them upon long sticks one by one, and drying them with the smoke of a soft fire. Carew.
2. To perfume the temples with an odorous flame,
And oft before him who was an empty name. Dryden.
The fuming of the holes with brimstone, garlic, or other unfavorly things, will drive moles out of the ground. Mortim.
3. To disperse in vapours.
The heat will fume away most of the scent. Mortimer.
- FUMETTE, n. f. [French] A word introduced by cooks, and the pupils of cooks, for the stink of meat.
A haunch of venison made her sweat,
Unless it had the right fumette. Swift.
- FUMID, adj. [fumidus, Latin.] Smoky; vaporous.

FUN

- A crafts and fumid exhalation is caused from the combat of the sulphur and iron with the acid and nitrous spirits of aquafortis. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. ii. c. 5.
- FUMIDITY, n. f. [from fumid] Smokiness; tendency to smoke. DiA.
- TO FUMIGATE, v. n. [from fumus, Latin; fumiger, Fr.]
1. To smoke; to perfume by smoke or vapour.
Wouldst thou preserve thy famish'd family,
With fragrant thyme the city fumigate,
And break the waxen walls to save the state. Dryden's Virg.
2. To medicate or heal by vapours.
- FUMIGATION, n. f. [fumigatio, Latin; fumigation, French;
from fumigare]
1. Scents raised by fire.
Fumigations, often repeated, are very beneficial. Arbuthnot.
My fumigation is to Venus, just
The fowls of roses, and red coral's dust:
And last, to make my fumigation good,
'Tis mixt with sparrows brains and pigeons blood. Dryden.
2. The application of medicines to the body in fumes.
FUMINGLY, adv. [from fume] Angriily; in a rage.
That which we move for our better learning and instruction fake, turneth unto anger and choler in them: they grow altogether out of quietness with it; they answer fuming, that they are ashamed to defile their pens with making answer to such idle questions. Hooker, b. v. f. 22.
- FUMITER, n. f. See FUMATORY.
Why, he was met even now,
As mad as the vex'd sea; fingering aloud, Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow-weeds. Shakespeare.
- FUMOUS, adj. [fumeux, French; from fume] Producing fumes.
- FUMY, adj. [fumy, French; from fume] Producing fumes.
From dice and wine the youth retir'd to rest,
And puff'd the fume god out of his breast:
Evn then he dreamt of drink and lucky play;
More lucky had it lasted till the day. Dryden's En.
- FUN, n. f. [A low cant word] Sport; high merriment; trulicksome delight.
Don't mind me, though, for all my fun and jokes,
You bards may find us bloods good-natur'd folks. Merc.
- FUNCTIO, n. f. [functio, Latin.]
1. Discharge; performance.
There is hardly a greater difference between two things than there is between a representing commoner in the function of his public calling, and the same person in common life. Swift.
2. Employment; office.
The ministry is not now bound to any one tribe: now none is secluded from that function of any degree, state, or calling. Wolfe.
You have paid the heav'n's your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.
Nor was it any policy of state, or ordinance of will, or partiality of affection either to the men or their faults, in which fixed me. King Charles.
This double function of the goddess gives a considerable light and beauty to the ode which Horace has addressed to her. Addison's Remarks on Pope.
- Let not these indignities discourage us from affecting the just privileges and pre-eminence of our holy function and character. Atterbury's Sermon.
3. Single act of any office.
Without difference those functions cannot, in orderly sort,
be executed.
They have several offices and prayers against fire, tempests, and especially for the dead, in which functions they use sacerdotal garments. Swillingfleet's Def. of Diss. on Rom. Ind.
4. Trade; occupation.
Follow your function; go, and batten on cold bits. Shakespeare.
5. Office of any particular part of the body.
The bodies of men, and other animals, are excellently well fitted for life and motion; and the several parts of them well adapted to their particular functions. Boerhaave's Comment.
6. Power; faculty.
Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function wailing
With forms to his conceit. Spears's Hamlet.
Nature seems
In all her functions weary of herself:
My race of glory run, and race of shame;
And I shall shortly be wit, them that rest.
Whatever warms the heart, or fills the head,
As the mind opens, and its functions spread,
Imagination plies her dangerous art,
And pours it all upon the peccant part.
Though every human constitution is morbid, yet are their diseases consistent with the common functions of life. Arbuthnot.
- FUND, n. f. [fundus, French; fundus, a bag, Latin]
1. Stock; capital; that by which any expence is supported.
He touches the passions more delicately than Ovid, and performs all this out of his own fund, without diving into the arts and sciences for a supply. Dryden.

FUN

- Part must be left, a fund when foes invade,
And part employ'd to roll the watry tide. Dryden.
- In preaching, no men succeed better than those who trust entirely to the flock or fund of their own reason, advanced indeed, but not overlaid by commerce with books. Swift.
2. Stock or bank of money.
As my estate has been hitherto either tost upon seas, or fluctuating in funds, it is now fixed in substantial acres. Add.
- FUNDAMENT, n. f. [fundamentum, Latin.] The back part of the body.
FUNDAMENTAL, adj. [fundamentalis, Lat. from fundament.]
Serving for the foundation; that upon which the rest is built;
essential; important; not merely accidental.
Until this can be agreed upon, one main and fundamental cause of the most grievous war is not like to be taken from the earth. Ra.igh's Essays.
- You that will be less fearful than disceat,
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt the charge of it. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
Others, when they were brought to allow the throne vacant, thought the succession should go to the next heir, according to the fundamental laws of the kingdom, as if the last king were actually dead. Swift's Examiner.
- Gain some general and fundamental truths, both in philosophy, in religion, and in human life. Watts.
- Such we find they are, as can controul
The fervile actions of our wav'ring soul;
Can fight, can alter, or can chain the will;
Their ill all built on life, that fundamental ill.
Yet some there were among the founder few,
Of those who less presum'd, and better knew,
Who durst assert the juster ancient cause,
And here restor'd wit's fundamental laws. Pope on Criticism.
- FUNDAMENTAL, n. f. Leading proposition; important and essential part which is the groundwork of the rest.
We will propose the question, whether those who hold the fundamentals of faith may deny Christ damnably, in respect of those superstructures and consequences that arise from them.
South's Sermons.
- It is a very just reproach, that there should be so much violence and hatred in religious matters among men who agree in all fundamentals, and only differ in some ceremonies, or mere speculative points. Swift.
- FUNDAMENTALLY, adv. [from fundamental] Essentially; originally.
As virtue is seated fundamentally in the intellect, so perspectively in the fancy; so that virtue is the force of reason, in the conduct of our actions and passions to a good end. Gray.
Religion is not only useful to civil society, but fundamentally necessary to its very birth and constitution. Bentley.
- The unlimited power placed fundamentally in the body of a people, the legislators endeavour to deposit in such hands as would preserve the people. Swift on the Diff. in Ath. and Rome.
- FUNERAL, n. f. [funus, Latin; funerarius, French.]
1. The solemnization of a burial; the payment of the last honours to the dead; obsequies.
Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest,
Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.
All things that we ordain'd festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral.
He that had cast out many unburied, had none to mourn for him, nor any solemn funerals, nor sepulchre with his fathers. Muc. v. 10.
- No widow at his funeral shall weep.
The pomp or procession with which the dead are carried.
The long funerals blacken all the way. Pope.
You are sometimes desirous to see a funeral pass by in the street. Swift's Directions to the Chambermaid.
3. Burial; interment.
May he find his funeral
P' th' sands, when he before his day shall fall. Denham.
- FUNERAL, adj. Used at the ceremony of interring the dead.
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad funeral feast. Shakespeare's R. and Jul.
Let such honours
And funeral rites, as to his birth and virtues
Are due, be first perform'd. Denham's Sophy.
Thy hand o'er towns the funeral torch displays;
And forms a thousand ill ten thousand ways. Dryden.
- FUNERAL, adj. [funereus, Latin.] Suited a funeral; dark; dismal.
But if his soul hath wing'd the destin'd flight,
Inhabitant of deep disastrous night,
Homeward with pious speed repairs the main,
To the pale shade funeral rites ordain. Pope's Odyssey, b. i.
- FUNGOSITY, n. f. [from fungus] Unsolid excrecence. DiA.
- FUNGOUS, adj. [from fungus] Excrecent; spongy; wanting firmness.
It is often employed to keep down the fungus lips that spread upon the bone; but it is much more painful than the echarotick medicines. Sharp's Surgery.

FUR

- FUNGUS, n. f. [Latin] Strictly a mushroom: a word used to express such excrecences of flesh as grow out upon the lips of wounds, or any other excrecence from trees or plants not naturally belonging to them; as the agarick from the larchtree, and auricula judæ from elder. Quincy.
- The surgeon ought to vary the diet as the fibres lengthen too much, are too fluid, and produce fungus, or as they harden and produce callosities. Arbuthnot on Diet.
- FUNICLE, n. f. [funiculus, Latin.] A small cord; a small ligature; a fibre.
- FUNICULAR, adj. [funiculaire, Fr. from funiculus.] Consisting of a small cord or fibre.
- FUNK, n. f. A stink. A low word.
- FUNNEL, n. f. [infundibulum, Latin; whence fundible, fundle, funnel.]
1. An inverted hollow cone with a pipe descending from it, through which liquors are poured into vessels with narrow mouths; a tundish.
If you pour a glut of water upon a bottle, it receives little of it; but with a funnel, and by degrees, you shall fill many of them. Ben. Johnson's Discoveries.
- Some the long funnel's curious mouth extend,
Through which ingested meats with ease descend. Blackm.
The outward ear or auricle is made hollow, and contracted by degrees, to draw the sound inward, to take in as much as may be of it, as we use a funnel to pour liquor into any vessel. Ray on the Creation.
2. A pipe or passage of communication.
Towards the middle are two large funnels, bored through the roof of the grotto, to let in light or fresh air. Addison.
- FUR, n. f. [furra, French.]
1. Skin with soft hair with which garments are lined for warmth, or covered for ornament.
December must be expressed with a horrid and fearful countenance; as also at his back a bundle of holly, holding in fur mittens the sign of Capricorn. Peacocks on Drawing.
'Tis but dressing up a bird of prey in his cap and furs to make a judge of him. L'Estrange.
- And lordly gout wrapt up in fur,
And wheezing asthma, loth to stir. Swift.
2. Soft hair of beasts found in cold countries, where nature provides coats suitable to the weather; hair in general.
This night, wherein the cubdrawn bear would couch,
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all. Shakespeare's King Lear.
Such animals as feed upon flesh qualify it, the one by swallowing the hair or fur of the beasts they prey upon, the other by devouring some part of the feathers of the birds they gorge themselves with. Ray on the Creation.
3. Any moisture exhaled to such a degree as that the remainder sticks on the part.
Methinks I am not right in ev'ry part;
I feel a kind of trembling at my heart;
My pulse unequal, and my breath is strong;
Besides a filthy fur upon my tongue. Dryden's Pers. Sat. 3.
- TO FUR, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To line or cover with skins that have soft hair.
How mad a sight it was to see Dametas, like rich tissue fur'd with lambkins? Sidney, b. ii.
Through tatter'd cloaths small vices do appear;
Robes and fur'd gowns hide all. Shakespeare's King Lear.
You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;
You fur your gloves with reasons. Shakespeare's Trail and Cress.
2. To cover with soft matter.
To make lampblack, take a torch and hold it under the bottom of a latten balon; and, as it groweth to be fur'd and black within, strike it with a feather into some shell. Peacocks.
The filters, mourning for their brother's loss,
Their bodies hid in bark, and fur'd with moss. Dryden.
Their frying blood compels to irrigate
Their dry fur'd tongues. Phillips.
A dungeon wide and horrible; the walls
On all sides fur'd with mouldy damps, and hung
With clots of rosy gore. Addison.
- FUR, adv. [It is now commonly written far.] At a distance.
The white lovely dove
Doth on her wings her utmost swiftness prove,
Finding the gripe of falcon fierce not fur. Sidney.
- FUR-WROUGHT, adj. [fur and wrought.] Made of fur.
Silent along the mazy margin stray,
And with the fur-wrought fly delude the prey. Gay's Post.
- FURACIOUS, adj. [furax, Latin.] Thievish; inclined to steal. DiA.
- FURACITY, n. f. [from furax, Latin.] Disposition to theft;
thievishness.
- FURBELOW, n. f. [fur and below.] Fur sewed on the lower part of the garment; an ornament of dress.
Nay, oft in dreams invention we bestow
To change a flounce, or add a furbelew. Pope.
